

Publications

A&M-Commerce proudly publishes several different publications with different intended audiences.

The Mayo Review

The Mayo Review is a creative, student-run, literary journal published by the Department of Literature and Languages at A&M-Commerce. The Mayo Review publishes artwork, drama, poetry, and prose in both print and online format. Submissions by faculty, staff, and students, as well as by creative writers outside the university community are welcome. Submissions are accepted year-round, and are subjected to a blind-review process by both faculty and student readers.

Sam Rayburn Series

The Sam Rayburn Series on Rural Life is published by the Texas A&M University Press with primary support from Texas A&M University-Commerce. Sam Rayburn was a distinguished alumnus of Texas A&M University-Commerce and the former speaker of the United States House of Representatives. This series honors Mr. Rayburn by encouraging nonfiction submissions that address various aspects of rural life in Northeast Texas and the surrounding regions as well as relevant works from other areas of the state.
