COURSE INFORMATION

Textbook:

Drugs and Society, Glen R. Hanson, 12th Edition, 2014
ISBN 978-1284036374

Course Description:

This course is designed to introduce the student to the social reality of drug use and drug users. We will study the historical significance and social construction of drug use, users, abuse and addiction. We will explore the relationships between individual and group behavior and their relationship to society. In addition, this course will look at issues surrounding drug use and its relationship to crime, medicalization in our society, and various movements aimed at drugs.

This course will utilize eCollege as an additional tool at throughout the course.

Course Objectives:

The objective of this course is to provide an understanding of drug use and its influence on society. We will explore sociological theories to explain drug use, drug users and the drug culture. This course will create an opportunity for student to learn basic terminology concerning drugs, associated behaviors, dangers, criminal relationships, class stratification, and the impact of drugs. Throughout the semester this course will provide opportunities for the student to expand their ability to think critically through a range of class interactions and writings.

Student Learning Outcomes:

1. Articulate a variety of social, individual and bio-chemical factors that impact definitions of drugs, as well as how these factors influence a drug's effect.
2. Understand the process of the social construction of drug use as a social problem.
3. Develop a familiarity with the various biological, psychological and sociological theories that seek to explain drug using behavior; including an analysis of their basic assumptions, limitations, and implications for social policy.
4. Display knowledge of the various drugs, both legal and illegal, used in American society, as well as the social reality that surrounds their use.

Students are expected to consider each of these objectives, goals, and expectations when contributing to class discussions and in completing their written work. The understanding and application of the assigned readings and class discussion is a necessary part in earning a top grade in this course.
