Organizational Leadership Program Description

The Bachelor of Applied Arts and Sciences in Organizational Leadership (ORGL) degree is a competency-based program that prepares innovative leaders for employment in an increasingly technological and global society. This program provides opportunities for students to receive credit for what they know and can do already, allows them to accelerate completion of their degree, and — because it is fully online — students are able to plan their study schedule around the rest of their day to complete the coursework.

Course Description

This course builds students' understanding of supervising through real-life concepts, examples, and practice so they can apply what they've learned effectively on the job. The responsibilities and demands of a supervisor are ever changing as our workforce becomes more diverse in terms of race, gender, and ethnic background. This course teaches students how to adjust the challenges of technological change – and how to help their subordinates adapt. It gives students an overview of an increasingly competitive marketplace, resultant corporate restructuring, and workflow redesign.

Student Learning Outcomes

Course Objective: Describe the foundation of fundamental skills through a pyramid of understanding the expanded scope of responsibilities for first-time, first-line supervisors through the chairman of the board in private, service, or public organizations.

This course introduces you to the world of work and the functions of a supervisor. Emphasis is placed on analyzing supervisory roles and the skills and competencies needed to be successful in today's ever-changing work environment. You learn to identify and discuss current environmental factors that influence and affect supervisory positions and each of the key functions of supervisors. The foundation of supervision is effectively planning the work to be done; properly grouping work activities and employees; hiring the people who possess the proper skills, knowledge, and abilities to do those jobs; and monitoring the activities of the work being done. In particular, you deepen your understanding of the major elements that help you establish and attain organizational and departmental goals.

Once goals are established, you learn how to effectively group employees to support those goals, determine the work to be done, find qualified job candidates, develop them, and keep their skills up-to-date. With plans, structures, and employees in place, supervisors must next design and implement controls to ensure that goals are met. Each area of planning, organizing, staffing, and controlling requires a high level of decision-making and problem-solving skills. Based on viewing interactive presentations, readings in the textbook, and completing assignments and exercises, you learn to develop a staffing, recruiting, and retention strategy, and a control process strategy. You propose a decision-making strategy, discuss motivational leadership in the context of today's workforce, and develop effective communication strategies and group- and team-building skills. You analyze the performance appraisal process, and propose conflict resolution strategies. After you analyze factors that impact change management and the supervisor's role in the collective bargaining processes, you demonstrate your mastery of what you've learned by taking a posttest composed of multiple choice and essay questions.
