Student Learning Outcomes

The successful student will:

1. Synthesize a range of material to develop and present a coherent narrative.
2. Develop and present a literature review on a topic of their choosing.
3. Compose and present at least one academic paper.
4. Critically analyze primary and secondary materials.
5. Engage as scholars with their peers both through the presentation of original material and by serving as discussants for the work others.

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

Course Requirements

Instructional Methods

This course is a traditional university seminar that is heavily dependent upon student engagement with both the material and each other. Through this you will learn more than if you simply sat there and watched a power point presentation.

Student Responsibilities

Students are responsible for completing assigned readings and or homework prior to the class for which they are assigned. Furthermore, given the format of the class students should have developed talking points/discussion questions prior to coming to class.

“Reading” for a seminar is not the same thing as reading a novel for purposes of entertainment. You need to familiarize yourself with the arguments advanced in the readings and to engage the material.

Since this is a seminar, your attendance is vital to your success in this course. You also have a responsibility to your peers to be here and to take part. A seminar is a cooperative endeavor that cannot succeed without your preparation and contribution. In other words, your attendance is not only vital to your success, but to the success of your classmates as well.

Students will succeed to the degree that they apply themselves to the material. Ultimately, a university education is up to the student—you own it. It is my recommendation that you review materials developed in class on the day that it is presented as well as periodically throughout the semester.

You will be responsible for writing a series of discussion papers dealing with the assigned readings. These discussion papers are to be distributed to the class prior to the class meeting in which they will be discussed. Students not presenting critical discussion papers will be responsible for reading and commenting on the discussion papers as part of the seminar. Further instructions regarding these assignments will be distributed separately and posted to D2L.

In addition to your discussion papers, you are responsible for writing a research paper for this class for presentation and discussion at the end of the course examining a particular ideology or idea. Again, specific instructions will be distributed and posted to D2L.

There will be three examinations in addition to a comprehensive final exam. If necessary, there will be readings quizzes if and when it becomes apparent that you are not doing your readings in a timely matter.

Grading and Assessment

Your grade will be determined using the following assessment tools.

You will write a minimum of 3 critical analysis papers for this class and lead the discussion of both the reading and your insights. Students not presenting will be responsible for acting as discussants for those presenting (this means YOU HAVE TO HAVE DONE THE READINGS as indicated above—discussants that have clearly not read and thought about the material the material will face adverse consequences).

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

The point values assigned to each element are as follows:

Critical Analysis papers	70
Participation/Engagement	140
Exam One	100
Exam Two	100
Exam Three	100
Final Exam	200
Thesis Paragraph	50
Working Bibliography	50
Final Paper	100
Attendance	140

Final grades in this course are determined using the following scale:

956-1050	A	630-734	D
851-954	B	0-629	F
735-850	C

COURSE AND UNIVERSITY PROCEDURES/POLICIES

Attendance: Attendance will be taken daily and you would be well-advised to attend every class—if for no other reason than the fact that experience demonstrates that you will not do well if you are not here. With this in mind, the attendance policy is relatively simple: As this is a seminar class, your attendance is required. Absences will be excused only under the most extreme circumstances. You have two absences to use without penalty. However, after two absences you will forfeit 5 points from the Attendance and Participation grade. Under extreme, verifiable circumstances, your instructor may waive this penalty at his discretion.

Electronics Policy: Experience has demonstrated that students do not really understand appropriate ways to use technology while in class. For this reason, the following rules are in place. {I have kept the electronics policy in place because it contains valuable information about the deleterious effects that technology has on learning.}

Cell phones

Numerous studies have demonstrated a strong correlation between phone use in class and poor academic performance (at least three different studies have determined that phone use in class may result in the drop of an entire letter grade for students who insist that the world will end if they aren't engaged in texting or scrolling through social media). For this reason, the following guidelines are in effect for this class.

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

You are not allowed to use your phone during class—there are no exceptions to this rule (please do not ask your professor to make an exception in your case as it will not be granted).

Students are expected to place their phones face down on the desk in front of them where the phone itself is visible. Once placed there, you should not touch it again until class is dismissed.

Failure to comply with this dictate will result in the imposition of a “telephone tax.” If you are seen touching or using your phone in class you will be assessed a five point penalty off of your grade for each infraction. There is no appeal or excuse that is acceptable, so please do not attempt to make such an appeal or excuse.

Laptops and Tablets

The use of laptops and tablets for note-taking must be approved by the professor. Again, science indicates that taking notes by hand is more effective at helping students retain information. This, in turn, assists in developing analytical and critical thinking skills appropriate to the university as a learning environment and for persons receiving a university degree.

Earbuds, Media Players, and Other Electronic Devices

While it is possible to carry your entertainment options wherever you go and wherever you happen to be, this class is not such a venue. Earbuds, headphones, etc. are a distraction for both you, as a student who is supposed to be actively engaged and responsible for your own education, and your professor. Put simply, it is rude to be listening to something else when you are ostensibly engaged in listening to someone else or in a conversation. Failure to remove such distractions will incur a tonal tariff. That is to say that for each infraction you will have five points deducted from your overall grade.

Academic Dishonesty

Academic dishonesty consists of any form of cheating or academic misconduct related to your role as a student. Examples of academic dishonesty may include, but is not limited to, plagiarism, copying another student's work, cheating on exams, quizzes, and/or assignments.

The most common form of academic honesty in an upper level class is plagiarism. Plagiarism is copying or appropriating someone else's ideas without attribution in an attempt to pass it off as your own. Changing some terms or words to synonyms to avoid getting caught in this form of theft is an aggravating circumstance.

The penalty for academic dishonesty in this class is an immediate "0" on the graded material on which the cheating was discovered. In addition, you will be penalized 5 points on your attendance and participation grade.

In addition, in accordance with university procedure 13.99.99.R0.03 Undergraduate Academic Dishonesty, you will be reported to the academic dean of the college in which your major department is housed and the department head in your major department so that a record of your offense may be maintained for purposes of future disciplinary action should it be required.

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

Under the policy, repeat instances of academic dishonesty may, result your expulsion from the university. With this in mind, consider that any short-term gain that you hope to attain by engaging in unethical behavior is simply not worth it. Furthermore, most of you are Political Science majors and you should think about the representation that you are making when you engage in the theft of others' ideas and arguments.

Conduct

Student conduct in the university is governed by university procedure 13.02.99.R0.06 Standards of Student Conduct. The university requires that all syllabi include a statement from section 2.2 of that procedure. The procedure maintains that students have the obligation “to follow the tenets of common decency and acceptable behavior commensurate with aspiration implied by a college education.”

Bear in mind that your behavior reflects not only upon you, but also upon the university. You are expected to demonstrate respect for the institution, your professors, and your fellow students in addition to your own education. This is true even in the context of courses in which controversial topics and issues (such as a political science course) may be discussed.

Your professor will serve as the arbiter of what constitutes appropriate respect and behavior in the context of this class. Students who fail to treat the institution, class, professor, and/or other students appropriately may be dropped from the class and reported to the Dean of Students for further disciplinary action should it be required. Examples of disrespectful behavior and attitude includes (but is not limited to) wearing sunglasses in class, failing to put your telephone on silent, failure to remove earbuds, sleeping during class, and having a bad attitude generally.

Contrary to what many people seem to believe, a university education is not a right. Rather it is privilege—and it ought to be treated as such. You should remember that this course is part of YOUR education. And your education is, in turn, ultimately your responsibility. Experience demonstrates that some students seek to shift responsibility to others: faculty, other students, etc. This is unfortunate and demonstrates an unwillingness to own that which is yours. Your professors and other university staff are here to help you to succeed, but it is up to you to decide that you are going to succeed and take the steps necessary to make that happen.

Your professor cannot force you to do your homework, read the material assigned for class, or study material presented in class, etc.—that is up to you. But it is true that your success is dependent upon you doing those sorts of things. If you choose not to and your academic performance is less than adequate, it is not the fault of your professor or anyone else. It is yours.
