COURSE INFORMATION

Materials – Textbooks and Supplemental Readings: There are no required textbooks for HC 401. However, this course does require outside research and/or utilizing handouts/readings provided in class.

Course Description:

Senior seminar is a capstone experience for students to perform an in-depth examination of an issue(s) as they relate to the major or career they have chosen. The course requires students to draw upon leadership training, coursework so far, experiences with other cultures (travel, internships, employment, etc.) to examine or reexamine their own positions in relation to topics of global interests.

Student Learning Outcomes:

- 1.) Demonstrate knowledge of the interconnectedness of global dynamics (issues, trends, processes and systems) and how selected trends or issues impact their future field or career.
- 2.) Apply what they have learned from key experiences in the Honors College to their plans for the future, identifying marketable skills from their work with the HC, the university, and other related experiences.
- 3.) Illustrate critical thinking skills through written work and oral presentations.

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

- 4.) Demonstrate effective communication strategies through written work and oral presentations.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Minimal Technical Skills Needed

Software or Technology Required: Access to myLeo Online (D2L Brightspace) and a word processing system (preferably Microsoft Word). Also for creating an online presentation with audio/visual capabilities, I suggest familiarizing yourself with Loom, Canva, PowerPoint or GoogleSlides with audio/video.

Instructional Methods: This course is an online course conducted through D2L/Brightspace. Class consists of presentations, online discussions and writing assignments. Students should engage with the online class frequently and participate as if they were engaging with fellow students in a face-to-face class but no set or synchronous meeting time is required.

Assessments

Course Assessments: Course learning objects will be measured through various oral and written assignments. Assignments will help students integrate experiences from the entirety of their college experience and apply to real-world problems. Students will also work collaboratively and evaluate each other's work. Assessment details and due dates will be posted in D2L through the course calendar and course content tabs.

Mini Journals (10 @ 15 points each): Rather than a public prompt and response thread online for discussions, each person in class will submit a small 'mini' journal reflection based on the weeks topic. Reflections should be well-thought out and about 200-300 words. Topics will vary and include reflection on experiences, marketable skills, global competence, and current events. Points are earned through quality and thoroughness of response. Journal entries will vary but will create small snippets of information to use for the final presentation. All journal entries should be typed, double-spaced and follow standard formatting rules.

Presentation Proposal (30 points): Students will submit a proposal for their "Impact on the Future" presentation idea. Students will identify an issue, problem or trend in their field and connect their experiences (on and off campus) to helping address or solve that issue. Share with me 2-3 articles that discuss the current issue you selected. Provide the links and then a short (2-ish paragraph) explanation of why you think it is important to pay attention to this. Students will spend time identifying and explaining the issue in their field, focusing specifically on what research supports addressing it. Additionally, students MUST draw upon international or global resources to show a local issue in a global perspective or global examples of effectively addressing issue. Why is this important and how are people attempting to address it?

Impact on the Future Presentation (100 points): You're graduating and entering the "real world." How might your skill set, experiences and expertise help society? This requires that you give some thought to what society may look like in the future and how you might contribute to a specific set of problems. How has your experience at the university (and this program) prepared you to solve certain problems? What problems are you passionate about solving? For an example of what I expect from your presentation, consult Ted Talks. You may have notes on a "teleprompter," but you may not read from cue cards or a written script during your recorded presentation. Your presentation must include visual elements while you talk. We should also be able to see you in the presentation rather than just utilizing a voice-over. In your presentation, you must clearly articulate:

- The future (or current) problem or issue you anticipate
- Why you anticipate this will be an issue (which you will justify with cited support from experts)
- Your topic or issue in a global context –who else is talking about this and what (if anything) is being done about it?
- What your skill set contributes to this problem? (your experiences and strengths)
- How you will solve or contribute to solving this problem

You may think of this presentation as a kind of proposal or sales pitch to someone who has the power to employ you or fund your endeavor. Imagine your audience as a wealthy benefactor who would fund it, a graduate school you want to allow you to study a specific topic relevant to problems in the world, a future supervisor you want to create a position within a company, et cetera. You have a lot of freedom to be creative here, but it is crucial that your presentation shows evidence of rigorous research, critical thinking, and creativity.

Presentations will be scored by class (40 points) and instructor (60 points) against an adapted version of the AAC&U's VALUE Rubrics: Oral Communication & Integrative Learning

Feedback Forms (Count for Participation/Attendance) When students begin presentations, each classmate will complete an online feedback report for the presenter based on an established rubric. You should take notes throughout the semester on your classmates' presentations for the final discussion post. Based on the presentation, what seems to be on the mind of your colleagues? What skill sets have they recognized or developed here at the university? How can you help encourage or empower those skills? What advice would you give your peer on continuing to develop their strengths while also keeping their eyes open about looking for problems in the future of their profession?

Presentation Critique (20 points): After watching some of the Impact presentations from previous semesters, select one and write a critique- what did the person do well? What could have been better? Did this person make a clear connection between their experiences and issue in their field? Familiarize yourself with the VALUE rubric (training video) and score this presentation. Justify your scores for each category so you will be prepared to fairly and accurately grade your classmates when the time comes.

Sample Cover Letter (20 points): Students will post a link in the discussion board to a position they are interested in and moderately qualified to apply for assuming some future condition (like graduation or a certification exam) is successfully completed. Students will then upload a formatted cover letter to the hiring director for this position, highlighting interest in the job as well as specific skills or experiences which make you a prime candidate. Students should use the marketable skills identified in the reflective journals through the semester to build the cover letter and speak to specific experiences that point to your qualifications.

Resume (30 points): Students will upload a copy of their current resume that includes relevant skills, experiences, education, volunteer work or employment history which provides detail and support to the cover letter submitted. Students should use the marketable skills identified in the reflective journals through the semester to build the resume and speak to specific experiences that point to your qualifications.
