Course Description

This global survey course explores a national and international view of the culture of schooling and classrooms from the perspective of current political, social, and familial issues affecting schooling and classrooms. Students will participate in early field experiences with varied and diverse student populations designed to analyze the learning environment and the human experiences of teachers and learners. Ten clock hours of Early Field Experiences are required.

STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES:

By the conclusion of the course, the students will demonstrate the following outcomes:

(QEP SLO1) Students will demonstrate knowledge of the interconnectedness of global dynamics. Students will be able to identify current issues in American and Global Education

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

Systems with particular attention to education structure and student diversities (e.g. governance, curriculum, language, gender, socioeconomic, ethnic and academics).

(QEP SLO2) Students will be able to apply knowledge of the interconnectedness of global dynamics. Students will be active and engaged participants in discussions by analyzing, construction/creating, and evaluating information presented within the assignments, class activities and EFE field-experiences.

(QEP SLO3) Students will be able to view themselves as engaged citizens with an interconnected and diverse world. Students will examine current issues in education with attention to language, gender, socioeconomic, ethnic and disability-based academic diversity and equity.

(SLO4) Students will examine and analyze the culture of schooling and classrooms from the perspective of current political, social, and familial issues impacting schooling and classrooms.

(SLO5) Students will participate in 10 hours of early field-experience in diverse classrooms to gain an understanding of the roles of elementary, middle and high school teachers. Students will communicate effectively, utilizing written and oral expression, throughout the course.

GOALS: The goals of this class include, but are not limited to, providing a critical overview of historical, intellectual, social, and political foundations of American education.

1. Emphasis on analysis of differing views regarding the relationship of public schools and American society.
2. Explore current controversies that will impact schools and teachers in the years ahead.
3. Provide an enriched integrated pre-service experience that allows for active recruitment and support of undergraduate students interested in careers in teaching.
4. Provide ample opportunities for students to engage in written and oral reflection as it relates to teaching.
5. Examine current issues in education with attention to language, gender, socioeconomic, ethnic, and disability-based academic diversity and equity.
6. This course is designed to be taught through activities and quizzes, as well as face-to-face lectures and class discussion.

COURSE AND UNIVERSITY PROCEDURES/POLICIES

Course Specific Procedures/Policies

Late Work

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

Specific dates and times are established for every assignment. Each student is allowed ONE late submitted assignment, which will receive a maximum 70% grade. Students should contact the instructor for possible extenuating circumstances, especially in the case of university excused absences. Work cannot be made up and extra work is not allowed to compensate for missing or later work.

Technology Failure is not an automatic approved excuse for submitting late work. If you experience a technology issue you should: 1. Contact the Tech Support Team and send a copy of the "trouble ticket" to the instructor to document your efforts; 2. Email the assignment directly to the instructor before the due date to document your efforts.

Syllabus Change Policy

The syllabus is a guide. Circumstances and events, such as student progress, may make it necessary for the instructor to modify the syllabus during the semester. Any changes made to the syllabus will be announced in advance.
