Assessments

1. Students should work a minimum of 9–12 hours per week in completing course assignments.

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

2. The course calendar (which includes due dates for assignments) is at the end of this syllabus.
3. Periods 1–3: Identify a topic in higher education (e.g., student affairs, faculty affairs, governance, organizational theory, culture, teaching, learning, distance learning, competency-based education, tenure, etc.) and acquire 25 research articles from journals that inform this topic. A “research article” is one in which data are collected and analyzed; for the purposes of this assignment, a “journal” is a peer-reviewed publication (note: the publication’s website should outline submission requirements and should describe whether or not submitted manuscripts will be vetted via peer review to determine acceptance for publication). The format for this paper is outlined in the file Bibliographic Research Paper – Format.doc and should be followed explicitly.

If you have a specific topic for your dissertation research (e.g., campus gun violence, faculty feelings regarding tenure, the teaching of doctoral students, etc.) focus on this topic; if you do not, focus on an area of your general interest in higher education and allow the readings to help you to develop a specific topic (e.g., based upon recommendations for future research published in the articles you acquire).

Note that for this course, it is helpful but not necessary that you have a specific dissertation topic. You have to read extensively to develop a dissertation research topic, so this course will help you begin this journey if you have not already done so; however, if you have already read extensively and have a dissertation research topic, this course will help you to continue this journey via more focused readings.

The paper must be emailed to the instructor by the due date/time. The grading rubric for this paper will be 60% content and 40% APA usage (includes grammar).

4. Periods 4–5: A dissertation’s Chapter 2 Review of the Literature (a) provides sufficient information to allow a reader to better understand the Chapter 1 Introduction, (b) places the dissertation study in the context of the field by offering important details associated with current theories and studies as well as seminal (i.e., older but influential) theories and studies, and (c) establishes to the dissertation committee that the candidate has a sufficient understanding of related work (i.e., has read broadly and deeply) to be considered an expert on the research topic and, thus, should be allowed to conduct the proposed research. Note that a Chapter 2 is not everything the candidate has read but rather is a select offering of literature that is organized in order to accomplish (a) through (c).

Acquire and read through Chapter 2 the following dissertations:

Foster, D. A. (2017). The effects of mindfulness training on perceived level of stress and performance-related attributes in baccalaureate nursing students

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

(Publication No. 1885054302) [Doctoral dissertation, Regent University]. ProQuest Dissertations and Theses Global.

Ginnings, D. L. (2016). The effect of a self-efficacy in autonomous learning treatment on academic achievement of online doctoral students (Publication No. 1849473093) [Doctoral dissertation, Regent University]. ProQuest Dissertations and Theses Global.

Kelly, H. F., IV. (2007). A comparison of student evaluations of teaching between online and face-to-face courses (Publication No. 304713996) [Doctoral dissertation, Regent University]. ProQuest Dissertations and Theses Global.

Kirk, J. R. (2012). Gender-based barriers experienced by male students in an online RN-to-BSN nursing program (Publication No. 1013882979) [Doctoral dissertation, Regent University]. ProQuest Dissertations and Theses Global.

Write a paper (approximately 10–12 pages, which includes a title page, text, and references section) that addresses the following:

- i. How and how well each dissertation satisfies (a) through (c) above;
- ii. How and how well each dissertation uses headings to organize ideas; and
- iii. How and how well each dissertation cites relevant information from the literature for both thematic reviews (i.e., reviews of themes as a presentation of overarching points) and study-by-study reviews (i.e., reviews of themes as a presentation of research findings); if possible, read the recommended review reading from Creswell and Guetterman (or an earlier edition) for further information.

The paper must be emailed to the instructor by the due date/time. The grading rubric for this paper will be 60% content and 40% APA usage (includes grammar).

5. Periods 6–7: A literature review of research articles should not be written until the articles are thoroughly read. Do not forget item (c) above: a doctoral candidate should be an expert; thus, to develop expertise, one must have a thorough understanding of extant research that cannot be had until such research has been meticulously read and considered. A superficial reading results in a superficial understanding, which must be avoided.
6. Periods 8–12: Based upon all previous course assignments, construct a literature review incorporating the material read for the BRP and any additional readings that models Chapter 2 of the dissertations read with respect to organization (i.e., relevant subsections with appropriate headings) and presentation (e.g., thematic and study-by-study reviews). This literature review should be approximately 25 pages, which includes a title page, text, and references section.

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

The paper must be emailed to the instructor by the due date/time. The grading rubric for this paper will be 60% content and 40% APA usage (includes grammar).
