Course Description

The goal of this course is to study modern technologies that are used to construct big-data computing systems and methods and tools for big-data analytics. The course is designed to be student-driven and interactive. It would be based on student presentations of selected research papers on big data coupled with instructor-led lectures. There would be hands-on practice by installing and configuring software used for big-data computing and analytics, especially Apache Spark framework with Python programming language. Students will learn to create programs running over a distributed setting.

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

AI use policy [Draft 2, May 25, 2023]

Texas A&M University-Commerce acknowledges that there are legitimate uses of Artificial Intelligence, ChatBots, or other software that has the capacity to generate text, or suggest replacements for text beyond individual words, as determined by the instructor of the course.

Any use of such software must be documented. Any undocumented use of such software constitutes an instance of academic dishonesty (plagiarism).

Individual instructors may disallow entirely the use of such software for individual assignments or for the entire course. Students should be aware of such requirements and follow their instructors' guidelines. If no instructions are provided the student should assume that the use of such software is disallowed.

In any case, students are fully responsible for the content of any assignment they submit, regardless of whether they used an AI, in any way. This specifically includes cases in which the AI plagiarized another text or misrepresented sources.
