I. Course Description

This statistics course for graduate that includes data presentation and normalization, types of variables and levels of measurement, descriptive statistics, and hypothesis testing using both nonparametric and parametric procedures. The course will also provide an introduction to using Intellectus, a computer program used for statistics.

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

II. Course Objectives

- The major objectives of this course are:
- To develop an understanding of the role played by statistics in the overall process of research;
- To learn an array of descriptive procedures for displaying statistical information in graphic and narrative form;
- To learn a variety of tests and procedures that can be useful in data analysis, subsequent hypothesis testing and decision-making activities;
- To demonstrate a critical understanding of how these tests can be used, their major weaknesses and strengths, and the critical assumptions underlying their legitimate application;
- To provide a foundation of statistical knowledge for pursuing more advanced statistical methods in future courses; and
- To learn to apply statistical concepts, scientific reasoning, and logic to social problems.

III. Course Content

A basic understanding of statistical methods is foundational to understanding and utilizing social science research.

IV. Course Structure

Class sessions will be a combination of lecture, discussion, and in-class exercises. Lecture material is intended to supplement, not review, the readings. Because the readings are a major source of learning, students are expected to study this material as it is assigned.

VI. Course Requirements

HAVE FUN! In spite of what you may have heard (or experienced in the past), numbers are not EVIL. Exposure to numbers will not cause erosion of your passion to help your clients. But numbers are necessary. You'll see them on almost every research article you read for the rest of your life. They are in the newspaper every day (if you're one of those students old enough to remember what a newspaper is). They are even underneath those nifty pie charts and graphs on your favorite news Web site. Basically, there are two kinds of people in this world – those who understand numbers and those who will be misled by them. Which do you want to be?

READ! Every week you will be expected to read at least two things. First, you need to read the assigned chapters in the textbook. I really apologize for requiring this because statistics textbooks are usually quite difficult to understand on first reading (but I really hope we find Salkind to be different). Do it anyway. All the important stuff will also be covered in class (I hope), but you'll probably need to see it all multiple times before it really sinks in.

DON'T GIVE UP! If you don't give up on me, I won't give up on you. As far as I'm concerned, this is your class. Let's work together to see if we might be able to become a user of numbers instead of someone who is easily duped.

IX. Consultation

Students are invited to contact the instructor with questions, comments, and concerns. While this course is intended to adequately prepare students for additional graduate studies in research methodology and statistics, support and encouragement is available to make it a positive experience for every student

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

Assignments are to be turned in electronically no later than the date they are due for credit. LATE ASSIGNMENTS ARE NOT ACCEPTED. PLEASE SEE COURSE CALENDAR FOR ALL DUE DATES.

Grading

Grades will be determined on a total point basis, covering multiple assignments outlined in the syllabus and found in the D2L course shell listed by week. Grades will be posted in point values in D2L. The final points will calculate on a percentage scale covered to a letter grade according to the following scale:

90-100 = A = Excellent/Outstanding 80-89 = B = Good/Noteworthy

70-79 = C = Average/Proficient 60-69=D = Below Average

59-below = F = Unacceptable

POST TEST	20%
EXAMS	30%
APPLICATION	20%
FINAL	30%

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

TECHNOLOGY REQUIREMENTS

LMS

All course sections offered by EastTexas A&M University have a corresponding course shell in the myLeo Online Learning Management System (LMS). Below are technical requirements

Mental Health and Well-Being

The syllabus/schedule are subject to change.

The university aims to provide students with essential knowledge and tools to understand and support mental health. As part of our commitment to your well-being, we offer access to Telus Health, a service available 24/7/365 via chat, phone, or webinar. Scan the QR code to download the app and explore the resources available to you for guidance and support whenever you need it.

AI use policy

East Texas A&M University acknowledges that there are legitimate uses of Artificial Intelligence, ChatBots, or other software that has the capacity to generate text, or suggest replacements for text beyond individual words, as determined by the instructor of the course. Any use of such software must be documented. Any undocumented use of such software constitutes an instance of academic dishonesty (plagiarism). Individual instructors may disallow entirely the use of such software for individual assignments or for the entire course. Students should be aware of such requirements and follow their instructors' guidelines. If no instructions are provided the student should assume that the use of such software is disallowed. In any case, students are fully responsible for the content of any assignment they submit, regardless of whether they used an AI, in any way. This specifically includes cases in which the AI plagiarized another text or misrepresented sources.
